A variety of bunkers are placed throughout the course to add to the challenge, and a natural approach has been maintained as well with the use of coquina shell cart paths, native plant life and preserved habitats for the local wildlife.

Course Info

At the conclusion of each seminar attendees should be able to understand and have full knowledge of each of the objectives listed below each course. No prior knowledge or skill level is required before attending these courses.

Is it Wise to Revise?: Treatment Strategies for Surgical and Non-surgical Retreatment

The surgical solution to a conventionally treated tooth that had become refractory to healing was once considered the final step prior to extraction, and that it was a singularly occurring event. Considering contemporary techniques and technologies, are either of these statements true? Or should it be viewed as an extension of the current therapy, either surgical or non-surgical, in a process of revision and remodeling. When is it appropriate to consider a second intervention, and what metrics are we using to determine this? Is it a stand-alone procedure, or are outcomes enhanced with co-treatment options? What is the alternative if the conventional surgical options are exhausted? This two-day presentation will examine the available literature for guidelines to these treatment decisions and, using multimedia, demonstrate various case scenarios and techniques.

Objectives: At the conclusion, the attendees should be able to:

- Appraise the literature and its relevance in contemporary Endodontic practice.
- Define the correct protocols for successful assessment and triage pre-treatment via "Virtual Surgery".
- Identify the various techniques for non-surgical harvest and recovery of intra-canal materials.
- Differentiate between possible re-surgical revision of previous root end treatment and those cases that are "one and done."

Endodontic Microsurgery: A Dying Art or Rising Phoenix

Apical surgery was once a significant component of Post-Graduate education and clinical practice; the transition to a microsurgical approach has also heralded a decline not only in the breadth of graduate training, but the prevalence of private practice cases as well. A shift in retreatment expertise is a partial explanation, but not the only one. Qualified mentors, sophisticated armamentarium, and shifting treatment paradigms are the denominators in either the demise of the practice or, more likely, the evolution of the modern Endodontic Microsurgical training. Advances in technique and technology allow the surgeon to plan in a digital environment, design precision aids for acquisition to the field and utilize elegant resection and refinement armamentarium. This presentation examines the challenges of the past and present, and how these are affecting an evolution and revolution in the microsurgical arena.

Objectives: At the conclusion, the attendees should be able to:

- Examine the classical and contemporary literature with regard to philosophy and relevance
- Implement the various imaging technologies in a "Virtual Surgery" digital environment to develop an effective and appropriate treatment plan.
- Compare the traditional root end operative procedures with modern Piezo approaches
- Describe the process of PRESS fabrication, from image acquisition to final stent
- Contrast conventional root end surgical access with GPS assisted surgery (Navident™)

Dentists who attend all three courses will earn a total of 11.5 CEUs.

Each continuing education activity is presented in a lecture format, with audio-visual accompaniment and an opportunity for questions.

SESG reserves the right to change the meeting schedule if deemed necessary.
